HILLDALE JERRY x—The grand old man of Sweet Home died recently at 16 years. J. W. Bennett sold him at a production sale to C. E. Jones, who brought him to the upper ranch on Big Elk. There were more than 100 cows there and also two red, horned bulls. When the calves arrived they were 80% polled and roan, Jerry's two trademarks. After two years of service on the upper ranch, Jerry came to Sweet Home. In the succeeding years he has sired many bulls and females of great quality. The herd will long be rich in his blood.

Shorthorns Best For Commercial Herds

BREEDER PROVES SHORTHORN BENEFITS

W. K. Black, Junction City, Ore., operates a successful dual Shorthorn operation raising both purebred Shorthorns and maintaining a crossbred herd.

Black has found that maintaining his own crossbred herd offers the best possible promotion for his purebred operation. The commercial herd also gives him a proving ground to constantly check and ensure that he is producing the right type of bulls and females to work in commercial herds in this area. It's this type of involvement and concern with his customers that makes his Shorthorn operation successful.

He maintains 25 commercial cows that are bred to Shorthorn bulls produced at his ranch. Many of the cows are by Shorthorn bulls with some Angus and Hereford. Black says, "The calves from these cows are what sell most of our bulls for us . . . they look that good."

The biggest percentage of his purebred bull production goes to crossbreeding operations. His buyers state they want to increase the milking ability of their herd and to increase weaning weights in their calves. Black's crossbred steers are able to go to market a month earlier than those of other breeds, meaning more profit.

Black's operation and management practices are another example of a practical cattleman who is concerned with putting more profit in the pockets of his customers. He is providing proof to his customers and to himself that Shorthorns are best in the commercial cowman's operation, in the feedlot and at market.

COWS LIKE DAD HAD

By Bob Gordon

Souris, Manitoba, Canada

NINETY-FIVE percent of the cattlemen and ranchers of all breeds talk about the big Shorthorn cows Dad used to have. Shorthorn cattle were the most useful and therefore the most popular for all-around farmer needs in supplying milk and beef for the farm fifty years ago.

If the exotics had not become popular, Shorthorns would have enjoyed their greatest crossing trade in history. However, what cattlemen fail to realize is their exotics for terminating crosses would be much better with a mother cow with Shorthorn blood in her veins, because she would supply more milk and therefore wean a heavier calf.

I am presently involved with four breeds of cattle, and I can honestly say and am prepared to back it up with facts, there is no mother cow like the Shorthorn. She is the greatest, most underrated mother cow in the beef industry today. If you don't think so, you probably never owned one.

I have sold Shorthorn bulls in numbers to the ranges of Montana and Wyoming. All of these ranches will tell you the cows with Shorthorn blood in them are the best cows. A North Dakota rancher who locates a lot of heifer calves each fall for replacements says, "I like the ones a lot better with Shorthorn blood in them, if I can find them. They are the easiest now to sell to give satisfaction to my commercial customers."

The more aggressive ranchers such as John Scott, Billings, Mont., and Padlock Ranch, Sheridan, Wyo., who each run in excess of 10,000 cows, have used a number of Shorthorn bulls successfully in the past five years.

If you are in the cattle breeding business now and have never used or taken a look at the new type of Shorthorn being developed today and have not looked at some of the three-way cross cattle in the ranchers' herds that have used Shorthorns, then I think you are missing something. The infusion of Shorthorn blood in your mother cow could be the fastest way to heavier calves at weaning . . . it has been for many others.

This Shorthorn-Hereford cross cow is the dam of a three-fourths Shorthorn calf at the K. W. Black herd, Junction City, Oregon.

THE SUPERIOR SHORTHORN CARCASS

By Tom Reedy
Mattoon, Illinois

Some recent work has shown the terrific ability of the Shorthorn cattle to make choice grade. A study was done by Jim Gosey, beef extension specialist at the University of Nebraska on 307 head of market steers and heifers shown at the 1970 Nebraska State Fair. Of the 307 head, 63.8 per cent of the cattle that met minimum weight requirements graded low choice or better. Only one Shorthorn failed to make low choice grade. Here are the breed comparisons:

Breed	per cent grading choice or above
Shorthorn	95.65 per cent
Angus	82.25
Crossbreds	62.96
Herefords	48.25

This type of study gives us proof positive that Shorthorns can fill the bill for higher quality beef.

In another, published comparison in Better Beef Business, it states the optimum weight for slaughter in Shorthorns is 988 pounds. It also states that the optimum weight for slaughter in most of the exotics are over 1200 pounds. This would indicate in order to get in that 1,050-1,150 pound range for slaughter that this cross with Shorthorn and exotics would be excellent.

SHORTHORNS TOP MARKET

ANOTHER example of Shorthorns topping the market was recently reported by Frank Morrison of Odessa, Mo.

Morrison topped the Kansas City market on July 13 with 16 Polled Shorthorn calves. His 12 steers weighed 11,610 pounds and sold for $32.25 to total $3,744.23. Four heifer calves weighed a total of 3,435 pounds and brought $31.00 to total $1,064.85.

SHORTHORN COW BEST

By Wendell Lovely
Wilsall, Montana

THE SUCCESS of any cow-calf operation depends directly upon the ability of the mother cow to perform consistently year after year.

A Shorthorn cow fits well into the picture. She is a fertile gal, a good mother and gives milk enough for any big-framed calf. She will rustle with the best of them and require little attention. She is not troubled with sunburned udder, prolapses and seldom needs attention for pink-eye and some of the other common eye ailments in cattle. Should she require attention at calving time or any other time, or if her calf should require attention, her docility enhances the ease in which you can administer this aid.

Shorthorn cows are noted for their long productive life, and when they have completed their duties as a breeding cow, their salvage at the local cattle auction is far greater than many of the worn-out breeding cows.

It is not hard to see from these advantages that a Shorthorn cow or a Shorthorn crossbred cow can do an excellent job for us in the commercial cattle business.

SHORTHORNS IN WESTERN HERDS

By Mrs. Lee Traynham — Arbuckle, California

Shorthorn bulls may be gaining in popularity and more widespread usage, but they have always been a factor here in crossbreeding.

The rangeman is going to keep coming back for our bulls because they are a time-proven product. Their calves wean heavier, their heifers will produce a heavier calf due to their larger milk production, and on top of it all their good disposition is a factor. It can't help but make a few less troublesome cattle working days for a cowboy here and there in the West.
